Northern Premier Criticises "Republic"

MR. DE VALERA'S classification of Eire as a Republic was criticised at Stormont yesterday by Sir Basil Brooke, when he spoke on the address in reply to the King's Speech.

A pact had been made on the constitutional position of Northern Ireland by Eire statesmen, and he added that it was forgotten by many people that the border was merely an outward sign of what was in their heads and hearts.

He had no doubt as to Ulster's constitutional position. They did not look at a dictionary to see what it meant.

If these politicians who talked about the iniquity of the border were to think or to realise that what they had in Northern Ireland was, in fact, a miniature of what existed in other parts of the world —boundary divisions which had arisen through differences in mind and heart—they could say, as he had heard it argued: "You are all Irishmen"; but they could also say: "We are all Europeans," which did not prevent boundaries and frontiers in Europe.

Every action taken by people in the South antagonised Ulster, and sometimes he was in doubt as to whether they really wanted a solution of the border question or whether it was just a happy battle flag to pull out at certain awkward moments.

In 1940, when Britain was standing alone, there might have been a moment when Eire could have said "You can have our ports and harbours and you can bring your troops in here in the South." They might have done that if they had been anxious that Ulster should come in.

Whether it was that desire for unity was second to the desire for neutrality he did not know. He believed the people thought that the British chicken was just about to have its neck wrung, and that that would be an end to Britain. Ulster would rather have gone down with Britain than have lived in any other company.

"I want to make it perfectly clear," said Sir Basil, "that, irrespective of cajolery, threats, arms and bullets, all those people who may be thinking that violence will attain what Constitutions cannot obtain, the Government will act firmly against any individual or body who tries to use these methods.

"In my opinion, and in the opinion of Mr. Churchill, Ulster, by maintaining its Constitutional position, and allowing Great Britain to use our ports and bases, saved Eire from the possibility of invasion."

Recently there had been a discussion in the Dáil as to whether Eire was a republic. He found it very difficult to understand how a republic could possibly be a member of the British Commonwealth.

Mr. H. Diamond (Soc. Republican, Falls), referring to the defence plans mentioned by the Prime Minister, said that the Northern Nationalists and Republicans had submitted a plan for the whole of Ireland against the threat of invasion. No action had been taken by the British or Northern Governments. The attitude of the Unionist Party was an invitation to any foreign Power to attack this country.

The voting list for the elections showed that between 9,000 and 10,000 people were in the services from Northern Ireland, whereas in the much-despised South there were some 200,000 fighting "for your safety and your defence."

Mr. W. Grant, Minister of Health—Hunger drove them.

The debate was adjourned.

Strike Will Not Affect Hospitals

Fears that Dublin hospitals might suffer inconvenience from the laundries' strike appear groundless. Enquiries by an Irish Times reporter yesterday showed that the majority of the hospitals launder their own linen, or have it done by religious communities and convents.

Deadlock persists in the butchers' and laundries' strikes. With more defections from the Dublin Master Victuallers' Association to accede to the strikers' demands, about one-third of the establishments are now open. Pork butchers returned yesterday after their one-day strike.

HONSHU BLASTED BY 2,000 PLANES

TWO thousand British and U.S. planes raided the Japanese island of Honshu from dawn yesterday until late in the afternoon, according to the Japanese News Agency.

While factories and war installations were being attacked, General Styer, Commander of the U.S. forces in the Western Pacific, speaking in Manila, said that the Philippines would soon become the "D-Day" base for operations against Japan, as Britain was the base for the invasion of Europe.

In yesterday's record raids over 1,000 carrier-based planes, including British units from Admiral Halsey's 3rd Fleet, hammered the huge Kure naval arsenal and other shipping targets in a dawn attack, while more than 600 Super-Fortresses from bases in the Marianas, Iwo-Jima and Okinawa bombed factories in the Nagoya and Osaka areas of Honshu.

Tokyo Radio, reporting fires in Osaka, Japan's second biggest city, added that military establishments and shipping in five areas on Honshu were attacked for two hours.

Kure's huge naval arsenal is already 56 per cent. destroyed or damaged as a result of the raids on June 22nd.

Yesterday's raids on the base are presumed to have had as target the bulk of the Japanese Imperial Fleet, or what remains of it, including battleships and aircraft carriers, of which the Japanese are now believed to possess only four. At least one 1,000-lb. bomb is reported to have scored a direct hit on a warship at the base.

British pilots from Admiral Halsey's Anglo-American "Fleet, swarming off the flight decks of 1,000-pound Japan's chief home air-fields, flew so low that they were able to distinguish grounded planes from the dummies which the Japanese had parked as decoys, said a message received last night from a Reuter correspondent on board a British battleship off Southern Honshu.

It was Britain's biggest air day in the Pacific war.

As the British vessels were launching their planes, the Americans were sending off their bombers and fighters almost faster than one could count.

Gunners were at action stations the whole day, expecting that the Japanese might be stung into action, but only reconnaissance planes showed themselves. These were chased off or shot down by the Fleet Air Patrol.

General Styer, commenting on preparations being made in the Philippines for the invasion of Japan, said that shipping totalling several million tons was expected to arrive in July, August and September, while several hundred thousand troops were expected to be redeployed in the Philippines from Europe during the same period.

Truman Urged To State "Terms"

Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (Republican, Nebraska) said in New York yesterday that he had been informed by a "high military source," whom he declined to name, that a communication had been sent to President Truman urging him to stop the Pacific "slaughter" by outlining specific surrender terms.

An A.P. message from Salzburg, Germany, states that American troops who have been guarding 100 Japanese diplomatic personnel and who have had ample opportunity to talk to them declare that, according to their prisoners, the former Japanese Ambassador, Oshima, if allowed to return to Japan, would urge the Tokyo Government immediately to submit to unconditional surrender.

Oshima believes, according to the internees, that surrender under any conditions would be preferable to the fate which overtook Germany under his own eyes.

Catholic Deputies Defend Leopold

[Reuter, A.P., and P.A.]

THE visit of Princess Elizabeth to Brussels this week-end has been cancelled because of the confused political situation in Belgium. The Princess was to have taken the salute at a Guards' parade.

Catholic speakers in the Belgian Chamber of Deputies yesterday presented a defence of the actions of King Leopold since the German invasion of Belgium.

M. de Vleeschauwer, Belgian Minister of Colonies in M. Pierlot's Government in exile in London, said: "When France collapsed and took the way of Vichy, Belgium was within an ace of following. That she did not do so she owes to her King."

Socialist and Communist deputies shouted in reply: "To the resistance movement, to the Maquis.

M. de Vleeschauwer then contested two points in M. van Acker's speech about the meeting at Berchtesgaden between the King and Hitler and the King's deportation to Germany, which, M. van Acker said, was by his own free will.

On Berchtesgaden, M. de Vleeschauwer said that on May 31st, 1940, Hitler invited King Leopold to meet him. The King first refused, but then decided that by meeting Hitler he might secure a softening of German treatment of Belgium in regard to the release of prisoners—of whom eventually only the Flemings were released—and the bread ration, which was smaller in Belgium than in France and Holland.

M. de Vleeschauwer accused M. Van Acker of preventing the King from returning to Belgium ever since he was freed. "Steps were taken through the Red Cross, but passports handed in with a view to his return were withdrawn on orders from the Prime Minister," he said. "False rumours regarding the King were spread."

M. Van Acker, interrupting, denied all this. M. Van Acker also denied another charge that all the prominent Belgians who were summoned by King Leopold to St. Wolfgang were received by himself before they left.

M. Paul Spaak, the Foreign Minister, interrupted de Vleeschauwer to ask where he obtained his information.

"It is the King's own communication," he answered.

"Who showed it to you?" Spaak persisted. De Vleeschauwer shouted back: "None of your business."

M. Spaak said that Mr. Churchill, Lord Halifax, and, perhaps, King George, wrote to King Leopold at the end of the 18 days' campaign in Belgium urging him to follow the advice of his Government and go to London.

M. Spaak read a memorandum written by M. Pierlot on the last interview, just before the Belgian collapse, between the King and his Ministers, who tried to persuade him to escape with them to England.

M. Spaak asked the King at this interview: "What can you do if you stay." The King replied: "I do not know, but I think I can save the people from suffering. In any case, the cause of the Allies is lost. I have a feeling that if I leave I shall never get back to Belgium. The Allies will soon give up, anyway. Britain may continue the war in the colonies or at sea, but there is no chance of any intervention in Belgium. We have the prospect of long years during which we may succeed in maintaining a reduced independence until more favourable times arrive."

The Chamber adjourned until to-day.

GAS-RUN CARS MAY NOW MAKE "EXCURSIONS"

MANY important restrictions on the use of private cars fitted with gas-producer units have been withdrawn by the Government. Such cars may now be used for the conveyance of their owners, family or servants to Church Services; for shopping or other excursions; for the conveyance of children to school and for attendance at funerals and weddings.

This latest Government announcement does not, however, mean that permits to fit gas-producer units will be issued indiscriminately to all car-owners. An applicant must still satisfy the Department of Supplies that the granting of a permit is essential for the carrying on of his business. Nor does it mean that cars may be used to travel to horse races, dog races, sports meetings, games or competitions of a sporting character, theatres, cinemas, dances, carnivals, social gatherings or entertainments or amusements generally. Neither may they be used for travelling on holidays, or by bona fide travellers under the Intoxicating Liquor Acts.

Some car-owners believe that the phrase "for shopping or other excursions," contained in the Minister's announcement, means that afternoon runs to the seaside, or short picnic trips will be permitted.

Nevertheless, gas-producer manufacturers in Dublin do not expect an influx of orders when the new announcement becomes known generally. Yesterday one manufacturer told our reporter quite frankly: "I can see no future for gas-producers. People are expecting petrol to be available again by January 1st, and nobody is willing to go to the expense of having a gas-producer fitted in the meantime. Personally, I don't think petrol will be available for at least another year—but that is only my opinion. Everybody else seems to think differently, despite all the warnings issued by the Minister for Supplies."

Gas-producers, all complying with Government specifications, are now being produced at prices ranging from £13 to £65. Between 2,000 and 3,000 are believed to have been fitted since the war began.

Japanese Escape Bid in Burma

Japaneses troops are being mown down in hundreds in their desperate bid to break out towards Siam from their positions in the Pegu Yomas foothills, says Reuter's correspondent on the Sittang front, Burma. Fifteen hundred Japanese dead have been counted on one section of the front, 500 on another. Besides these, there are hundreds of wounded and diseased Japanese dying in the flooded paddy fields.

Two thousand five hundred men of the Japanese 28th Army are still on the wrong side of the "escape road." The original force, which was trapped in the Pegu foothills, was estimated at roughly 1,000. By last night, 128 prisoners had been taken.

In Europe, the correspondent adds, for every German killed from 10 to 20 prisoners would be taken; in Burma for 10 Japanese killed one is taken prisoner.

A record-breaking fleet of 305 Far East Air Force planes made a heavy raid on Japan's largest air base in China, near Shanghai, and struck at a Japanese convoy in the Whangpoo River, sinking three ships, including a destroyer, and probably sinking ten others. Forty-five planes were destroyed or seriously damaged on the ground.

More Stranded Travellers Sail

More of the 1,100 travellers who were stranded in Dublin last Saturday, when the mail boat was unable to sail, left Ireland yesterday. Sailings are expected to be normal to-morrow.

The substitute mail boat, Cambria, took almost 200 passengers who were to have sailed on Saturday, after all travellers holding Tuesday sailing tickets, together with British Services personnel, had been accommodated. Other stranded passengers travelled to England yesterday via the Waterford-Fishguard and the Larne-Stranraer routes.

Once again many people spent the night sitting with their luggage at the entrance to Carlisle Pier. Members of the Irish Red Cross Society worked all night providing them with coffee and biscuits.

When the boat left the harbour, at about 8.45 a.m., some 100 passengers were left at the gates. There was very little heckling. Three days of waiting in Dublin, with little food, drink, or rest, had taken all the spirit out of them.

Once again it seemed that there was a flourishing black market in sailing tickets. Overworked and over-tired officials did their best to locate the sellers, but without success. One man who had been queuing all night with a Saturday sailing ticket left the queue early in the morning, and shortly before the boat sailed marched to the gate with a Tuesday sailing ticket. He was closely questioned, but was allowed to pass.

At about 8.35 the gates were closed, and the official announced: "No more to-day. That's all. But you'll all get away to-morrow." Somebody asked: "Is that definite? The official replied, "Yes."

Then a woman who had been up all night on Sunday and Monday asked: "Will the people who have been here since Friday get first preference?" The official said: "Yes, you will, sure." But when he was asked "How?" he did not reply.

Coras Iompair Eirann announce that on Sunday next a train service will operate between Westland row and Dun Laoghaire in connection with the sailing of a special boat in each direction between Dun Laoghaire and Holyhead. Inquiries at Dun Laoghaire pier early this morning failed to elicit any information regarding the special boat.

Wounded Commander Back—Commodore John Collins, C.B., Commander of the Australian Fleet in the attack on Leyte, and who was wounded when a suicide bomber dropped on the flagship, is back again in command. The Commodore is a son of the late Dr. Michael Collins, of Cork, who went to Australia in the nineties of the last century.

Churchill Leaving Potsdam

To Hear Results Of Election

MR. CHURCHILL, Mr. Attlee and Mr. Eden will return to London by air to-day to hear the results of the polls to-morrow, and will then, according to present arrangements, go back to Potsdam.

If Mr. Churchill fails to get a majority his resignation would not necessarily follow immediately, and he would, therefore, be in a position to return with Mr. Attlee and Mr. Eden to complete the work of the Potsdam Conferences.

Churchill, Stalin and Truman yesterday held their last meeting before the Conference goes into "recess." There are hopes at Potsdam that the interruption to the Conference will not last longer than over Thursday, and that the British leaders will return on Friday.

One has the impression at every turn in Germany that the occupation authorities are "marking time" on vital problems, pending the receipt of a hard directive from Potsdam, which will enable them to know where they stand, and to what extent they are authorised to go ahead with essential tasks of administration.

Elaborate plans have been made in New York and Washington to give minute by minute reports of Thursday's election results, for which, says Reuter, all America is tensely waiting. It will be politically the most exciting day since President Roosevelt's last "victory night," and the story from London will dominate newspapers and radio.

Leading politicians and Government officials have planned parties around tape machines, and blackboard scores will be kept throughout the day.

MAYO RIVER DRAGGED FOR MISSING BOY

EVIDENCE of the alleged movements of the accused man and the finding of a spade head in the River Deal was given yesterday at Ballina, Co. Mayo, before District Justice G. Guy, when the hearing was continued of the charge against Stephen Murphy (28), Ballycorroon, Crossmolina, of murdering Michael Joseph Loftus (84), Ballinlobaun, between June 17th and 25th, 1945.

Detective-Sergeant C. Donovan stated that in the dragging operations on the River Deal a spade head was discovered on the bed of the river.

Sean Connor, Ballycorroon, stated that he passed the accused man and the deceased boy together on June 14th.

Michael Reape, Lecarrow, said that on the evening of June 17th, while at a house called Cadden's, and during the search for the boy, he asked Stephen Murphy did he know where the boy was. Murphy replied that he did not know.

John McGuinness said that on June 24th a search party was organised, and he left home at about 2 p.m. to join the party. As he was passing through a pasture field belonging to Michael Cullen he saw Stephen Murphy close to where the body was subsequently found.

Mr. Humphries (for the State): What was he doing when you saw him? I could not say rightly. He seemed to be looking into the whins.

Sergeant Thomas Guickian, Crossmolina, said that for eight days several hundred people took part in the search for the missing boy. On Sunday, June 24th, he met Stephen Murphy at about 11 p.m. on the Ballycorroon road, and he had a conversation with him. "I asked him," said witness, "what time did he go to McGuinness's farm on the morning the boy was missing and he replied 'ten minutes past eleven,' and added that he had the bicycle at first Mass, and when he returned he put on the potatoes for dinner."

The hearing was adjourned till to-day.

Food Shortage In Rome

The only people who are content in Rome to-day are the "black marketeers," who have cornered the trade of over a million Romans and three quarters of a million refugees and Allied troops.

So efficient have these opportunists become and so inefficient are the measures taken by the authorities to eradicate illegal trading, that newspapers quote the prevailing "black market" prices for commodities, many of which are unobtainable through legal channels.

"... and anyone who prophesies that next winter will be above starvation level is talking through his hat," said Dr. T. J. Kiernan, Irish Minister to the Vatican, in an interview with an Irish Times reporter last night.

Dr. Kiernan said that the Vatican administration for food distribution in Italy was a model. Large sums of money were lent by groups of Irish and Italian Catholics in the United States. Members of the religious communities throughout Italy have opened communal kitchens in those areas which suffered most from air raids and demolitions. The £100,000 sent by the Irish Red Cross to the Vatican was very well spent, mainly on food, Dr Kiernan said.

The Irish community in the Vatican now numbers about 120, Dr. Kiernan said. A few Irish citizens managed to leave during and before the German occupation.

With Dr. Kiernan are his wife and two daughters, Nuala and Orla. A third daughter, Bloy, married Lieut. A. Hodgson, of Johannesburg, in Rome, and is at present on her honeymoon at Lake Como, in Northern Italy.

Welsh Trawler Sinks Off Cork Coast

Albert Mitchell, a member of the crew, received rib injuries and Patrick Holden, another member, is suffering from shock following an explosion that caused the sinking of the Milford Haven trawler, Gozo (80 tons), off the old Head of Kinsale, Cork, yesterday morning. The explosion was attributed by the crew to a mine.

Another trawler, the Phœbe, took the Gozo in tow after the explosion, but she sank within an hour.

Slaughter Of Calves Criticised

That there were too many young and inferior calves in the country, and that he did not favour compulsion to stop slaughtering them, was stated by the secretary of the Department of Agriculture in an interview with members of the Irish Live-Stock Exporters' and Traders' Association. The members, at a meeting last night, said that they disagreed with this opinion.

If they kept on killing the calves, eventually there would be a shortage of stock, and they would be in a bad position in two years, said Mr. Sheridan, who said that the slaughter of calves was the biggest disaster that had befallen the country.

Injunction Sought in Meat Dispute

THE hearing of a motion for an interlocutory injunction to restrain picketing of the victuallers' premises of Peakin Brothers, 91 Parnell street, Dublin, was begun before Mr. Justice Overend in the High Court yesterday, and adjourned until to-day. The applicants, Kevin Peakin and his brother, Donal, claimed an injunction against James Larkin, general secretary of the Workers' Union of Ireland; Thomas Ward, Mountjoy square; Patrick O'Connor, Cole's lane; Michael Kavanagh, Dunmanus road, Cabra, and George Jolly, Fenian street, Dublin.

Mr. J. M. Fitzgerald, S.C.; Mr. W. O'B Fitzgerald, S.C., and Mr. T. A. Doyle (instructed by Messrs. J. J. McDonald and Co.) appeared for Messrs. Peakin; Mr. P. J. Ros, S.C.; Mr. Vaughan Wilson, S.C., and Miss Waverell (instructed by Mr. Cecil Boyle) for Mr. Larkin; and the same counsel (instructed by Mr. Cyril A. Boyle) for the other defendants.

Opening the motion, Mr. W. O'B. Fitzgerald said that Messrs. Peakin were not employers of trade union labour, and they had no dispute with their employees which could in any way be described as a trade dispute, or a dispute at all. The defendants, in their affidavits, gave as reasons for picketing the premises that a trade dispute existed between the union and the Dublin Master Victuallers' Association, and that, as Messrs. Peakin were members of that association, they were a party to the dispute, and that a trade dispute between the firm and the union had existed since 1937 and had never been settled.

Mr. Larkin further stated that since June 27th last the association had carried on the business of selling meat by means of a central organisation in depots which were staffed by members of the association and non-union labour. Messrs. Peakin's premises were, he alleged, used by the association for that purpose.

Those allegations, Mr. Fitzgerald said, were emphatically denied.

Mr. Roe said that at the outset his clients had a complaint that the Court had been induced to grant an interim injunction by the withholding of material facts by Messrs. Peakin, who, from July 12th had had their premises free from the picket which should have been on them. They had concealed the fact that they were members of the Master Victuallers' Association, with which the union had a dispute.

With regard to an allegation in Mr. Peakin's first affidavit that the picket had behaved in a noisy, intimidating and unruly manner, Mr. Roe said that if the picket had behaved in that way the union would not stand over it at all.

Mr. Justice Overend said that he was sure that Mr. Larkin would not countenance anything disorderly.

Northern Ireland War Effort

SIR BASIL BROOKE, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, gave details of the province's war effort in the House of Commons last night. Figures he quoted included:—

AGRICULTURE—The province sent £3,000,000 worth of fat sheep and cattle to Britain annually during the war, and provided 20 p.c. of her home-produced eggs.

SHIPBUILDING—Belfast constructed 140 warships and 123 merchant vessels. Merchant shipping represented approximately 600,000 tons, or 10 p.c. of the total United Kingdom merchant building.

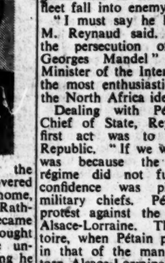
ARMAMENTS — Northern Ireland produced nearly 500 tanks and over 500 guns, 14,000 gun barrels and other gun parts, 42,000 carbine machine-guns, and approximately 75 million shells.

AIRCRAFT — The province constructed 1,500 heavy bombers and repaired approximately 3,000 aircraft.

TEXTILES—Over two million yards of cloth for the Services had been woven and over 30 million shirts made.

CITY MAN DIES AFTER ASSAULT

MEMBERS of the Detective Branch, Dublin Castle, were yesterday investigating the death of Mr. John G. McEntagart, a Dublin businessman, which took place in a city private nursing home late on Monday night. Mr. McEntagart had sustained severe head injuries when attacked by a number of men outside the Classic Skating Rink and Ballroom, Duke street, of which he was managing director — on Saturday night. Dancers, hearing a scream shortly after 11 p.m., rar to th main doo to fin Mr. Mc Entagart lying semi-conscious on the ground. Later, he recovered sufficiently to return to his home, Dunfirth, Butterfield avenue, Rathfarnham. On Monday he became ill suddenly, and after being brought to a nursing home, became unconscious. Later in the evening he was operated on by a brain specialist, but he never recovered consciousness, and died after 11 p.m.



A post-mortem examination held by Dr. John McGrath, State Pathologist, at the City Morgue, Dublin, yesterday, established that death was due to fracture of the skull and haemorrhage of the brain. An inquest will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. McEntagart, who was a former pupil of Wesley College, was 47. About 18 years ago he was a successful competitor in Irish Motor Trials. He was managing director of McEntagart Bros., Percy place, Dublin, motor engineers and distributors, and had large interests in entertainment circles. As well as being managing director of the Classic Skating Rink, he was managing director of the Bohemian Theatre, Phibsborough, chairman of the Harold's Cross Greyhound Racing Association, Ltd., and a director of the Savoy Cinema, Waterford, and the Savoy Cinema, Galway.

He is survived by his widow, daughter and two sons. His brother, Mr. Percy McEntagart, who also was a director of McEntagart Bros., died about a year ago.

Dr. Griffin's Plea For Poland

THE Catholic Archbishop of Westminster, Dr. Bernard Griffin, calling for the "re-establishment of a free Poland," declared at Birmingham last night that uneasy compromise would sow the seeds of further discord.

Re-echoing a question by the Prime Minister: "Are the Poles to be free as we in Britain and the United States or France are free," Dr. Griffin told a meeting of past students of the English College, Rome: "The answer so far is an emphatic negative."

He added: "The whole political and social life of Poland is, in fact, though not in name, under the closest control of the Soviet authorities and the dreaded N.K.V.D. No sort of political opposition is tolerated. The overwhelming majority of the Poles outside Poland are quite unwilling to go back to Poland as it is now.

"I regard it as essential to any hope of the establishment of a free and independent Poland that there should be immediately (a) freedom for Poles and Allies to pass to and from Poland; (b) removal of secret police from Poland and the abolition of the dictatorship of press and radio; (c) a guarantee of elections under joint Allied supervision.

"I do not believe that our statesmen can be happy in conscience unless they take steps to guarantee genuinely free elections. If to oppose Communism is to court imprisonment and death, the Polish elections will go down to history as a mockery.

"I do not say that it is impossible to live at peace with a totalitarian regime. We ask nothing of Soviet Russia except respect for the essential rights of other peoples. What I am saying is that we shall have lost the peace if we allow our first ally, Poland, to be turned into what the Prime Minister described as 'a mere projection of the Soviet State.

"I cannot believe that it is beyond the power of wise statesmanship to insist on the re-establishment of a free Poland since the West has so much to offer the Soviet in supplies and security. The overwhelming majority of Polish people are living in Poland. To sentence them to live under a Government chosen by Soviet Russia is to make a mockery of their gallant struggle throughout the war years.

"The question of Poland is part of the larger question of the fate of all Europe. There are many signs that Central Europe may become in fact, if not in name, a western extension of Soviet power. If such a policy is permitted by the United Nations, Europe will be divided into two blocs, with disastrous consequences for future world order.

"We must not delude ourselves by imagining that peace will come without our efforts and merely by giving way all the time. By honesty in word and purpose, and by ever insistent prayer to the Prince of Peace Europe can still be saved."

PETAIN ON TRIAL

"No Man Did More Harm To France"

ANGRY exchanges between counsel for the defence and M. Reynaud, former Premier of France, a witness for the prosecution, marked the second day of the trial of Marshal Pétain; and protests were made by some of the jurors, who asked if they were trying Reynaud or Pétain.

M. Reynaud gave several instances of what he described as Pétain's traitorous actions, and said that no man had ever done more harm to France.

M. Daladier, who was Premier when the war broke out, was the next witness. One of his charges was that, as Supreme War Commander and as War Minister, Pétain neglected to prepare the country for war.

In outlining events in the years before the war, M. Reynaud said: "It would seem that since February 6th, 1934—the day of the Stavisky riots—when he was called to take office by M. Doumergue, Marshal Pétain was seized with a thirst for power. Long before the war Pétain was opposed to the fortification of the northern frontier against the advice of Foch and Weygand, and he was opposed to two years' military service."

Describing the Cabinet meeting on June 15th at Bordeaux, at which he opposed the conclusion of an armistice, he said: "M Chautemps favoured asking the Germans for terms. I wanted to leave for Africa. I took a piece of paper divided into two, and on one side wrote the names of those in favour of Chautemps's proposal, and on the other side the names of those in favour of mine. If I recall correctly, there were 13 names in support of Chautemps and six names in favour of my proposal."

THE ARMISTICE

Reynaud said he learned of the conditions of the armistice on June 23rd. Until then Darlan had declared himself ready to take to sea if France capitulated, and told Reynaud that orders would be given that in no case would the fleet fall into enemy hands.

"I must say he kept his word," M. Reynaud said. "Then began the persecution of myself and Georges Mandel" (at that time Minister of the Interior, and one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the North Africa idea).

Dealing with Pétain's acts as Chief of State, Reynaud said his first act was to overthrow the Republic. "If we were defeated, it was because the Parliamentary régime did not function. Blind confidence was placed in the military chiefs. Pétain raised no protest against the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine. Then came Montoire, when Pétain placed his hand in that of the man who had just torn Alsace-Lorraine from us. The dismissal of Laval changed nothing. The Darlan régime was worse still. Double-crossing tactics have been mentioned, but if Pétain was playing a double game what does it avail if one of them was infamous?"

KING LEOPOLD

In a passing reference to King Leopold, Reynaud, referring to his own broadcast at the time of the capitulation of the Belgian Army, said that if he had accused the King of the Belgians it was to say that in his rôle as head of the Belgian Army King Leopold had forgotten that he was to follow his Government.

Maitre Isorni, for the defence, cross-examining M. Reynaud, referred to a proposal to nominate Reynaud as Vichy Ambassador to Washington, and said that, while Reynaud had not refused, President Roosevelt had objected.

M. Reynaud replied that President Roosevelt had intimated his astonishment that Reynaud should consent to represent a Government dominated by the Germans. This note, Reynaud said, arrived after his own refusal had been despatched.

Maitre Isorni's last question was: "In what conditions did you offer Mussolini on May 29th, unknown to Britain, condominium in Tunisia and French Equatorial Africa?"

M. Reynaud said he had never acted without Britain's knowledge, and had not offered Mussolini a condominium.

Several jurymen interrupted the cross-examination with loud protests when Counsel declared that "not many Resistance people had in their records such good testimony to their staunchness" as had Marshal Pétain.

"You have no right to speak to members of the Resistance Movement like that," one juryman angrily shouted.

MORE ACCUSATIONS

M. Daladier followed M. Reynaud in the witness stand. He said he would testify "with sadness, but without resentment."

As War Minister in the Doumergue's Cabinet, he (Pétain) reduced arms credits by twenty per cent. at a time when construction of tanks and anti-tank guns could have been begun. Yet only a little time before he had refused to agree to Hitler's proposals to limit the French and German armies to equal numbers, which would have been of advantage to France, having regard to her lower population.

He refused to authorise construction of the 47 m.m. anti-tank gun, which the war later proved to be excellent, and left plans for modern tanks untouched on his table.

Passionately defending his policy during the "phoney war" of the winter of 1939-'40, Daladier said he was waiting for arms from the factories and for promised British divisions to reach the Continent, but when the moment came "those men"—Pétain, Weygand and others—had already, for the misfortune of France, made their choice.

M. Daladier will continue his evidence to-day.

Chamossaire To Beat Hycilla

ADDITIONAL light will be thrown on the St. Leger prospects of Chamossaire when he contests the Princess of Wales's Stakes at Newmarket to-day.

He will have stout opposition from Hycilla, winner of last year's Oaks and Champion Stakes, but she may not prove equal to giving 16lb. to Chamossaire. Perryman's charge ran a splendid race when fourth in the Derby, and is likely to have improved since then.

CORK FOR FOOTBALL TITLE

By PATO

ALL provincial finals are complete in hurling and football—with one exception, the Ulster football final between Cavan and Fermanagh. From Enniskillen headquarters comes the news that the men from the Erne valley are very confident—they have better fancied sides on the way to the final.

They are fast and skilful, but I doubt if they have sufficient big game experience for such a seasoned side as Cavan, who have farmed the Ulster titles in successive years. Cavan have the best set of forwards remaining in the championship.

The hurling issue is clean-cut—Tipperary v. Antrim; Kilkenny v. Galway. Though Antrim hurlers showed near skill against Donegal at Derry, I doubt if they could hold the survivors of a stout Munster championship. Tipperary won well against Cork, and scored a winning sequence of goals against Limerick.

The Galway-Kilkenny game at Birr is an open affair. Birr pitch suits Galway's close style; Kilkenny wingers want room to operate. Not yet eight games at this venue Kilkenny have won seven times.

I am forecasting a Tipperary-Kilkenny hurling final at Croke Park on the first Sunday in September. Whether Galway or Kilkenny win at Birr we are assured of the best final in recent years.

The football semi-finals are also interesting. Cork meet Galway at Croke Park on August 12th, and Wexford are awaiting the Ulster winners at headquarters a fortnight later. The All-Ireland football is fixed for Croke Park on September 23rd.

No outstanding team has appeared despite the fall of fancied counties like Roscommon, Kerry, Dublin, Carlow, Kildare and Monaghan. My impression is that Cork, a resurgent team, will go far this year, and it is not out of the bounds of probability that Cork footballers will retrieve their hurlers' failure and win their first football title in thirty-four years.

"N. I. CLUB SHAKING THE MONEYBAGS"

SPEAKING at the annual meeting of the Cork United Football Club, in Cork last night, Mr. H. R. Kenworthy, Chairman, said: "I am sorry to say that at least one of the North of Ireland clubs is shaking the moneybags at our players, and one of them has gone up there. I am sure we all take a poor view of this poaching.

"We know they have the money up there—saving income tax, they say—but it is certainly not good sportsmanship." He said it was hoped that Cork United would again this season be able to field a team of the highest standard.

Dr. N. Gould, Hon. Treasurer of the club, said that last season they had lost:—

On the Dublin City Cup ..	£449
" " Shield ..	£234
" " League ..	£151

From the Inter-City Cup they had received £500, but their expenses for this had come to over £400.

Societies' Golf Final

RAMBLERS and Gamblers G.S. last evening at Dun Laoghaire set a record in the 22-year-old United Societies' Association by being the first society to win the Cup two years in succession. In the final they defeated Drapers by two matches to one.

In the leading match, Joseph Carr and Kevin Troy (Drapers) had to concede two strokes to James Malone and Des. Purcell, but the latter pair were too steady and accurate on the greens, and, although losing two of the first three holes, balanced matters at the fifth by winning it and the 4th with "birdies." They also had a "birdie 4 at the 8th to take the lead, and turned 2 up.

The Ramblers increased their advantage to 3 at the 14th, but lost the 15th to a 4. Carr's drive to the 16th cleared the group for Troy, whose fine second finished on the left, and after Purcell had played a magnificent pitch to six yards past the flag, Malone holed for a 3 and the match by 3 and 2. The winners wanted two 4's to be round in 70 gross.

The second match, played level, also finished at the 16th in favour of the holders. Brendan Scannell and Kevin Doyle always had the advantage of P. X. Kelly and M. F. Fitzpatrick. Two under for the first nine, they turned 2 up. Not once did the losers take the lead.

J. Malone (1) and T. D. Purcell (4) beat J. B. Carr (-1) and K. Troy (1)—3 and 2; B. J. Scannell (scr.) and K. Doyle (5) beat F. X. Kelly (2) and M. F. Fitzpatrick (3)—1 and 2; J. D. O'Reilly (scr.) and P. Coghlan (3) lost to P. Gallagher (7) and J. F. Sullivan (12)—2 and 1.

Whitcombe Family In Form

A BATTLE of giants, in which Reg. Whitcombe, former open champion, beat James Adams, Scottish internationalist, by one hole, proved the finest duel in the second round of the News of the World £2,000 match play tournament, at Walton Heath, yesterday. Whitcombe was 2 down with 5 to play.

Past winners of the tournament, Henry Cotton, 1936, and Percy Alliss, won their matches. Cotton outplayed Ted Rowlands, having a brilliant burst from the seventh holes—3 4 3 4 3—to win on the twelfth green.

The Whitcombe family finished the day with three of their members in the field. Ernest beat Arthur Lacey on the nineteenth green, and young son, Eddie, needed only twelve holes to dispose of J. T. Rush.

Harry Bentley (scr.), 30 secs. behind Alfred Perry, who clash in to-day's first third round match, easily won their games, each having a score of 34 for the first nine holes on the new course.

Cod Liver Oil in Sugar Coated Tablets

Sickly, skinny, nervous, overworked men and women get stronger, healthier, more vigorous, and put on needed weight in a few days just by taking JESSELS COD LIVER OIL EXTRACT TABLETS. They are as tasty as sweets, and they are marvellous!

Everybody knows that Cod Liver Oil is a wonderful vitaliser, health producer, and fresh strength, because it contains more than any other food, the essential vitamins A and D. But the oil itself is sickening, has a nauseating smell, and is indigestible, so Doctors everywhere now prescribe JESSELS COD LIVER OIL EXTRACT TABLETS because they replace the oil to advantage.

Applications on the standard form, which will be supplied on request, should reach the undersigned not later than Tuesday, 31st July, 1945.

Sir,—

I feel I must write you to say how pleased I am with the results obtained from your Cod Liver Oil Tablets. I was persuaded to try them by a friend, and although I only have taken about four boxes (one month's course) my general health and vitality have improved remarkably. I also increased my weight by 14½ pounds.

I will have pleasure in recommending them to others.

Yours, etc., (Mrs.) B. J.

HOW LONG?

"If we stay here much longer we'll qualify for the vote," said an American correspondent with the Allied naval force which has been patrolling the coast of Japan for almost a fortnight, and shelling the shore installations from close range. A day or two ago Admiral Halsey steamed actually into the mouth of Tokyo bay, and the Allied warships were clearly visible from the shore as they pumped high explosive into Japan. Yesterday 2,000 American and British aircraft left their carriers to raid airfields and industrial areas. In spite of this extreme provocation, however, opposition to the attacks has been negligible. There is no sign of the fierce resistance that was encountered around Okinawa. Fighters, "suicide aeroplanes" and surface craft have been absent; shore batteries have remained silent; anti-aircraft fire has been the only retort to the almost impudent assaults of the American and British forces. What is the reason for this lack of opposition? Undoubtedly the Japanese Fleet has suffered heavy losses, by which its effective strength has been much reduced; but it still is regarded, in British naval circles at least, as by no means a negligible fighting unit. Aircraft losses, too, have been extremely severe, but the speed of replacement has exceeded all expectations. Probably the decision not to molest the Allied Fleet was due less to a shortage of forces for immediate action than to a desire to conserve all resources to combat the invasion that undoubtedly is threatened. Oil, in particular, must be one of the vital factors. Japan's best sources have been cut off by the Australian invasion of Borneo and the Allied domination of the intervening seas; and whatever stores are available in Japan must be treated with care, since it may be impossible to replenish them. The cost of waiting is heavy. Huge areas in all Japan's industrial cities have been devastated; thousands of people are homeless, and many vital industries must have been put out of production. Nevertheless, if Japan's almost limitless endurance can enable her to stand up to this sapping of her strength, there is little doubt that she will be able to use her forces to the best effect in the actual moment of invasion. Landing craft are vulnerable targets, and the mountains which sweep down in many places to the coastline afford an excellent opportunity for the kind of desperate defence which cost the Americans so many lives at Okinawa. It seems certain, too, that the inhabitants will show the same fanatical valour in the defence of their homeland that has been exhibited by their soldiers in the field. Invasion, in short, is certain to be a grim and bloody business.

In these circumstances, the Japanese, for a people which certainly faces ultimate defeat, are in a strong position. American public opinion already has begun to grow restive over the loss of so many men in the Pacific battles, and it is the more probable, therefore, that Mr. Truman will lend a sympathetic ear to the appeal, recently addressed to him by some unidentified "high military source," to "stop the Pacific slaughter." It is hardly likely that an invasion of Japan could be undertaken at once, or from the existing bases Okinawa, the nearest, is 400 miles from Japan, and much too small to make a satisfactory springboard, even with the Philippines for use as a general base; and weather conditions will not be propitious until October, when a dry season of about four months begins. Presumably, then, before the Allies strike at the sacred shores of Nippon, they will have to expend more forces upon the acquisition of suitable bases, probably on the coast of China. If the Russians decided to declare war on Japan, matters might be speeded up by the intrusion of Soviet armies into Manchuria or Korea—or at least by the provision of bases in Siberia, from which Sakhalin and Hokkaido would offer stepping-stones for invasion. Still, the final reckoning would cost many thousands of lives, and the Allies would gain little political advantage by it that they could not secure from an immediate settlement. Japan presents a different problem from that of Germany. There will be no question of "re-educating" the people, and it almost certainly will be necessary to retain the Emperor, who is more a religious than a political figurehead. None of the Allies, presumably, cherishes the ambition to occupy Japan; democratic government, in the Western sense, is out of the question, and the only solution left is to select the most accommodating clique and exercise control through it. Such a compromise, one would think, could be achieved at once, without further slaughter and destruction on either side. Is it possible that, in fact, the present attacks on Japan are designed not to preface invasion, but to obviate the need of it? Do the Allies hope, by these demonstrations of their overwhelming might, to induce Tokyo to give up an apparently hopeless struggle? Probably the answer will have to wait until the "Big Three" make it clear what precisely is involved for Japan in "unconditional surrender." If they demand simply the forfeit of Japan's external territories, and outline some such programme as that at which we have hinted for Japan itself, the Emperor and his advisers may decide to surrender at once, in the knowledge that they cannot gain more favourable terms by prolonged resistance. The subsequent settlements in the Pacific will be, on the whole, rather more tricky. Britain will wish to maintain her pre-war position; America most certainly will demand a large number of island bases, stretching right across to the Philippines and as close as possible to the shores of Japan; China wants Manchuria and Formosa, and probably covets Korea; Russia, as usual, is poker-faced, but, no doubt, will want a "sphere of influence" in north-east Asia, with Port Arthur and Karafuto thrown in. Japan's future may depend largely on these ambitions. America may feel inclined to maintain her as a bastion against Russian expansion into the Pacific, and at the same time may be afraid of driving her, by too harsh treatment, into the more accommodating arms of Moscow. Britain probably will agree on the need for one strong Far Eastern Power, and may regard Japan as a safer bet than China. In short, if the old, tortuous games of statesmanship come into their own again, Japan may profit by the rivalries of her conquerors.

Light and Power

The report of the Electricity Supply Board for the year 1944-45 has a number of encouraging features. It appears that, in spite of the continued existence of emergency conditions, the Board made such progress as was practicable towards the extension of a satisfactory system of electricity supply throughout the country. During last summer a fairly severe scheme of rationing had to be introduced, on account of the low level of the Shannon and the scarcity of coal for the Pigeon House generating station. Later in the year, however, the situation eased; and in December one of the two main generating sets at the Poulaphouca station was placed in temporary commission, with improvised switch and control gear, and contributed fifteen million units to the total output. Schemes for the development of the Lower Erne and the Lower Liffey were completed for submission to the Government, and investigations into water power resources were carried out on several waterways, including the Lee. At the same time the possibility of further turf-burning power stations was considered, and a site has been tentatively agreed upon for one such station, in addition to that at Portarlington. It would seem that plans are going ahead satisfactorily, and that the great object—that every resident in Ireland, no matter how remote his home, shall have an adequate supply of electric power at a low cost—is some small degree nearer to attainment. Water and turf are two things which this country has in abundance, and their conversion into light and power is an excellent example of the effective utilisation of natural resources. The position in regard to the fisheries under the E.S.B. is not quite so pleasing. During the year the run of salmon on the Shannon was down by 36 per cent.—an alarming reduction, which seems to give colour to the view of many fishermen that the Board is destroying the fisheries. There is no point in robbing Peter to pay Paul. Electricity is important, but fisheries are not to be ignored; and we would suggest that the views of experts in regard to their conservation should be sought at once.

COURTESY!

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I am an Irish citizen and a British officer. In company with my cousin, an Irish South African ex-P.O.W., I arrived in good time at Kingstown, to find great crowds waiting. We were returning from leave to duty on our due day. We cheerfully waited for our turn, willing to give up if the ship could hold no more.

I must strongly protest at the rudeness of the officials concerned. We stood with various other members of H.M. Forces from far countries. When finally the mail boat pulled out, no one made any announcement whatsoever, nor could any one answer a nicely made request for information as to what time we ought to turn up to-morrow, or when we might expect to sail, so that we could inform our units.

Lastly, we tried in vain to be directed to the Pier Master's office, to ask if he would kindly mark our leave passes to the effect that we were not absent without leave. Unassisted, we finally found this gentleman's office, to be kept out by police and what appeared to be postmen. We made our request to a minor official, who told us to go to the "American Counsel"! I may mention that by now we had been joined by three Canadian gentlemen. We remained good-humoured, but the L.M.S. and their complete lack of good manners really cause me to give up all hope of any better way of life in this country.—Yours, etc.,

"A VERY FREQUENT USER OF THE L.M.S."

TECHNOLOGICAL COLLEGES URGED

The lack of proper facilities for higher technical training was the reason why the more important industrial positions in the country were held by aliens, said Mr. W. M. Cleary (Limerick) in his presidential address to the annual congress of the Vocational Education Officers' Organisation in Dublin yesterday.

He urged the establishment of technological colleges as a supplement to the technical schools, and the enforcement of the Apprenticeship Act to safeguard the craftsmanship of the building and engineering trades.

"DISASTROUS"

Finally, we have the factor of control of wages and salaries, exercised through the Standstill Order made in 1941. This has operated to limit or to prevent the re-adjustment of incomes in this class. Only in the case of wage earners and the lower salaried classes was any measurable re-adjustment whatsoever permitted. It is a curious thing that, because Government controls permitted, as already pointed out, liberal re-adjustments in the case of the agricultural, industrial and trading community. It is an Order also which could be easily evaded in the case of employees of private concerns. There is no means by which its enforcement can be checked up on. On the other hand, it has been a most effective means of preventing any re-adjustment of salaries in the case of many public servants. It was an Order made, no doubt, with the best intentions, but it has proved really disastrous for many who are among the best servants of the community.

Surely, it was never intended, by this emergency measure, so to distribute incomes in the community as to lower very considerably the relative salaries of our Ministers of State, Judges, District Justices and leading State officials, and to subject them to very serious financial disabilities. Yet this has been, unquestionably, a very evil result of this Order, which prevents any increase in salaries at a time when incomes otherwise, by the increase in the volume of money, are being automatically increased.

The clear conclusion is that the increase in the volume of money and some of the steps taken by the State to control the position during the emergency have led to a grave maldistribution of incomes. This has resulted in a grave injustice to one section of the community. The problem is not one of avoiding inflation—it is not a question of increasing the volume of money unattended by any increase in the volume of goods. It is a question of securing that a factual and very great increase in the total volume of money in the State is, to some degree within reason, equitably distributed.

POSED AS INDIAN ARMY OFFICER

Alfred Robert Weston (28), no fixed address or business, was sentenced to two terms of six months' each, to run consecutively, in Dublin, yesterday, for having obtained credit to the amount of £17 18s. 4d. by false pretences from Mr. T. Murphy, Cliff Castle Hotel, Dalkey, and for obtaining 30s. by false pretences from Flight-Sergeant R. E. Cusack, of the Australian Air Force.

Weston stayed at the Cliff Castle Hotel, Dalkey, on the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, saying his name was Weston Drummond, and representing himself as a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Indian Army and a doctor. During his stay he incurred debts amounting to £17 18s. 4d., including the cost of a party which he gave to celebrate his engagement to the daughter of a well-known Dalkey resident.

D.O. O'Connor said that in 1943 Weston had stayed at the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, posing as the skipper of the flying boat, Caledonia, and had obtained money by falsely pretending he would give flights to people. For that he had been given a suspensory sentence on condition that he returned to the Royal Air Force, from which he was a deserter.

Returned for Trial.—At Kilmainham yesterday, John Rice, Oldcourt, Tallaght, was returned for trial, on bail, charged with having broken into the premises of Maurice and Edward Collins, Mount Peter, Ballinahinch, Tallaght, Co. Dublin, on May 27th and stealing £217 in notes.

ARTICLE II.

MONEY AND INCOMES IN EIRE

By "Stimulus."

THE increase in the volume of money over the war years has, in fact, been accompanied by a re-distribution of incomes. Statistics covering the period up to the end of 1943 were given in this year's Budget speech. The total of personal incomes of the whole community, agricultural and non-agricultural increased from £150 million in 1938 to £228 million in 1943, an over-all increase of 52 p.c. The amount attributed to agriculture, forestry and fishing was £39 million in 1938 and £84 million in 1943, being an increase of 115 p.c. The increase in the case of the non-agricultural community was from £111 million to £144 million, or 30 p.c.

Personal incomes of the non-agricultural community are shown broken down into groups: those below £150 per annum increased in total from £51 million to £68 million, or by 33 1-3rd p.c.; those between £150
